Woodbury University Graphic Design Students Capture 15 Awards In Prestigious Graphis International New Talent Competition

12 Undergraduates Receive Design Merit Awards in Five Categories

LOS ANGELES (May 6, 2015) – In the largest single group recognition in the Graphic Design Department’s history, Woodbury University students have won 15 Design Merit Awards in the 2015 International New Talent competition sponsored by Graphis, The International Journal of Visual Communication. Graphis has published the world’s most significant and influential works from the greatest talent in design, advertising and photography since 1944.

Among the honorees are several multiple award-winners, in categories ranging from logo design and package design to identity branding and beverage packaging. Students include Haley Clark, Package Design; Christin Davidian, Logo Design; Maria Deroyan, Package Design; Matthew Johnson, Poster Design and Logo Design; Natalie Krakirian, Logo Design; Sara Lind, Logo Design; Nicole Mercado, Beverage Packaging; Evan Ohl, Package Design; Gilbert Ruiz-Ortega, Identity Branding; Manuel Sanchez, Logo Design and Logo Design; Martin Sanchez, Logo Design and Package Design; and Courtney Wolf, Package Design and Logo Design.
“The descriptor, ‘New Talent,’ could not be more fitting -- these students truly are among the brightest lights in the field,” said Sue Vessella, M.F.A., Chair of Woodbury’s Graphic Design Department and Associate Dean of the School of Media, Culture & Design. “Individually and collectively, they reinforce each other and affirm why our Graphic Design program is experiencing such remarkable momentum.”

By any measure, Woodbury’s Graphic Design Department is enjoying a banner year. In its April edition, design news magazine Graphic Design USA named Woodbury's Graphic Design program to its 2015 “Top Design Schools” listing. The roster of the leading 25 schools in the nation is derived from a combination of reader and industry surveys. In February, four Woodbury graphic design students were named winners of the 2015 American Package Design Awards, sponsored by Graphic Design USA, bringing the total number of awards received by students enrolled in the university’s Graphic Design program to more than 60 since 2009.

Woodbury’s Graphic Design Program grants a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree, which is included in the university’s accreditation by the National Association of Schools of Art and Design. The BFA is a professional degree, which translates to a top education resulting in strong, competitive student portfolios that stand out in the graphic design industry. Woodbury students consistently win international and national design awards, and have achieved recognition in entertainment design, web design, advertising design, package design, photography, identity design and environmental graphics.

Small class size allows individual attention from the professional faculty and educational experiences both inside and outside of the classroom, which provides students with the ability to create effective and engaging visual communication solutions. The program has gained a reputation for graduating top quality designers ready to take their place in the profession.
